The original documents of the Ciudad Juárez Municipal Archives (Archivo Municipal de Ciudad Juárez or AMCJ) are housed in the Biblioteca Regional Arturo Tolentino in Ciudad Juárez, Chihuahua, México. The archives date from 1726 to 1970, and include documents that reflect the many functions of the Ciudad Juárez municipal government, such as the minutes of the town and city councils, personnel and financial records, registers of land, correspondence on judicial matters, and criminal reports. The records also contain a variety of materials such as censuses, mining claims, brand registers, accounts of military activities, and requests from federal and state authorities for reports on various matters, and other documents of historical value.

The Ciudad Juárez Municipal Archives have been microfilmed and are available for viewing at the University of Texas at El Paso. Two separate filming of the Juárez Municipal Archives exist: Archivos del Ayuntamiento de Ciudad Juárez (MF 495) and Ciudad Juárez Municipal Archives (MF 513 pt. I & II). The latter is a second filming and is considered more complete and of a better quality.

Claudia Rivers, Head of the Special Collections Department, at the University of Texas at El Paso library supervised this editorial/indexing project. Víctor Macías, Ph.D, then a graduate student at UTEP, initiated the project and inventoried over half of the microfilm collection. As a graduate student in History at UTEP and staff at the Special Collections Department, Samuel Sisneros completed the project, which totaled 114 rolls of microfilm.

Relating to the Ciudad Juárez Municipal Archives microfilm collection is the Juan Uribe Manuscript Collection (MS 352). The Juan Uribe Collection is a group of documents that were most likely separated from the Ciudad Juárez Municipal Archives (Archivo Municipal de Ciudad Juárez). It is possible that these documents got into private hands during land registry litigation and stayed in the private possession of families of those people involved in the land issues. The Juan Uribe Collection contains a total of 806 pages of documents that are primarily inventories of estates, and land registry, interspersed with various civil and criminal judicial proceedings. See Guide to the Uribe Collection along with the original documents at the Special Collections Department, UTEP.

It is the purpose of this volume to present a comprehensive guide that will facilitate better access to the Ciudad Juárez Municipal Archives. Other inventories that compliment this work are:

TOPONYMY

The name of the metropolitan area of modern-day Ciudad Juárez had gone through countless variations during its 336 years of existence. Today, the city is the seat of the Municipality of Ciudad Juárez. Given the settlement's geostrategic importance, the jurisdiction of the highest-ranking resident official varied over time, according to the changing political environment of New Spain/Mexico. For simplification and better understanding of the English-speaking researcher, the jurisdiction of Paso del Norte/Ciudad Juárez can best be understood as corresponding to that of a county. Thus, Paso del Norte/Ciudad Juárez has functioned as the county seat for a region with a radius of 100 to 50 miles. For approximately the past 140 years, , the settlement has served as the cabecera (seat) of Distrito de Bravos or Cantón Bravos. Other equivalents of the term distrito during the first 50 years of Mexican Independence include partido, cantón (1847-?) and prefectura. The term partido may be problematic, it is applicable both to a "county" and to smaller precincts within a "county." Thus, while authorities divided the State of Chihuahua into 11 partidos (counties) in February of 1826, documents from the mid-nineteenth century use the same term to refer to the significantly smaller precincts within partido/canton/prefectura/distrito of El Paso/Bravos. Previously, under Spanish rule, the town served as cabecera over the jurisdicción del Paso del Rio del Norte. Another term that often surfaces between the period 1800-1860, especially in legal testimony, is the term país, which translates into English as "country." In modern Spanish, this concept is expressed by the term comarca, and is used to refer to "region" or "province." Thus, the region is often referred to as "País del Paso."

Another difficulty relates to the larger political entity of which Paso del Norte was a part. Under Spain, official correspondence and decrees were received from both the royal governors of the Reynos (Kingdoms) of la Nueva Mexico and la Nueva Vizcaya, by way of the provincia de Chihuahua. The jurisdiction of both Kingdoms over the region was unclear, and further complicated by the creation of the Comandancia de las Provincias Internas de Occidente, with the official residence of the Comandante changing from Durango to Arizpe, Sonora to San Felipe el Real del Chihuahua.

The researcher interested in ecclesiastical questions will find that, while the area fell under the jurisdiction of the Bishopric of Durango, the Franciscans in the region had a distinct hierarchy to follow. In more modern periods, an overlapping of Mexican and American bishoprics also confuses the question further.

TYPES OF DOCUMENTS: Book A: Reports, Appointments, Finances.

ORIGINS OF DOCUMENTS: Correspondence of Jefe Político, Distrito Bravos. (Felipe Seijas)

For this reason each book section will be given a paging sequence number in the frames column as dictated by a new set of frame numbers or page (fojas) numbers. Each set of documents constitutes a separate expediente within legajo titled "Book A"; appears to be a copybook with inserts.
