EL PASO.

We are called upon again to take account of stock so as to arrive at the business El Paso has done in 1903—to see whether the prediction long ago made that she is destined to become a great commercial city is being fulfilled.

We find the year to have been another record breaker. The city has forged ahead as never before. El Paso has become a modern up-to-date city. Two hundred and twelve residences and twenty business houses are under construction at this writing. December shows big business in real estate transactions. Transfers are made with a view to substantial improvement as investments. The people have faith in their city, and why not? The advantages we have so often pointed out as El Paso's own are constantly becoming so plain that he who runs may read. Topographically she is richly blessed. An altitude of 4,000 feet makes this an ideal residence point. The healthseeker nowhere can find a climate nearer perfection. Clear skies, bracing atmosphere—every element conducive to longevity—are found here. Geographically El Paso holds the key to the situation. Today she has nine great railroads. All roads lead this way. The country around her is developing with giant strides. El Paso is the supply point. Trade is growing. Merchandise goes out, gold comes in. Wealth seeks investment; buildings are erected; manufacturing enterprises are inaugurated; mechanics and artisans come in; more houses are demanded; more dwellings are built, and so the ceaseless round, the ever going forward, until today El Paso has a population of 34,281.

We stand by every good word we have ever said about El Paso in the past and reiterate what we said last year that in our belief the next decade will see 100,000 happy people on the site of what only a seeming few years ago was known as Ponce's Ranch.

The publishers of the El Paso directory, desiring to keep up with the procession, have each year incorporated a new feature into the directory. The Street Guide of last year which brought us so much commendation is repeated this year. In addition we have at great expense had made a thoroughly reliable map of El Paso, a copy of which is furnished each directory subscriber. The map shows the new ward lines and voting precincts. It is indexed so that every street may be readily found and distances from the Custom House are also shown.

We thank the people of El Paso for their continued confidence and support.
