Biography or Historical Sketch

The El Paso Committee to End the War in Vietnam was formed on October 23, 1965 by twelve current and former students of Texas Western history professor Richard Trexler. Nick Cheshire was elected chairman and Howard S. White vice-chairman, though White soon left the group. The Committee's purpose was to denounce U.S. policy in Vietnam and advocate for the end of the Vietnam War. Although the group stressed its non-extremist views, it still faced much opposition from El Paso officials and some Texas Western faculty, administrators, and students, particularly over its decision to stage a peaceful demonstration in San Jacinto Plaza. Dr. Trexler received many death threats over his involvement in protesting the war in Vietnam. Several Committee members lost their jobs or were kicked out of their homes by their parents for participating in the San Jacinto Plaza anti-war protest. The El Paso Committee to End the War in Vietnam was monitored by the FBI.
