BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH

Samuel Lyman Atwood (Slam) Marshall, military historian, was born on July 18, 1900, in Catskill, New York, son of Caleb C. and Alice Medora (Beeman) Marshall. A few years after his birth the family moved to Boulder, Colorado, and subsequently to Niles, California, where young Marshall worked for a while part-time as a child actor with the Essanay Motion Picture Company. The family settled in El Paso in 1915. Marshall was attending El Paso High School when the United States went to war with Germany, and on November 28, 1917, he enlisted in the army. He served in France as a sergeant with Company A, 315th Engineers, of the Ninetieth Division. In later years he claimed that he had received a battlefield commission, commanded troops on the Western Front, and was the youngest second lieutenant in the American Expeditionary Forces. It has since been shown, however, that he was not commissioned until 1919, after he completed the course of instruction for infantry-officer candidates at La Valbonne. Thereafter he held various posts with the Services of Supply until he left France in the summer of that year.

After returning to civil life in September 1919, Marshall briefly attended the Texas School of Mines (now the University of Texas at El Paso) and then worked at various jobs until 1922, when he began his journalistic career with the El Paso Herald. During this time he adopted his nickname, Slam, an acronym of his initials, for his bylines. He served as a reporter, sports editor, and city editor of the paper until 1927, when he joined the staff of the Detroit News. There he remained as editorial writer for most of the remainder of his life except for absences connected with military service. During the pre-World War II years he traveled frequently to Mexico and Central America as a correspondent covering events in those countries. He also became a commander on military affairs, and when the war broke out in 1939 he began an evening radio broadcast on station WWJ. In 1940 he published his first book, Blitzkrieg, which was favorably received by the great British military historians J.F.C. Fuller and Basil H. Liddell Hart.

Marshall reentered the army as a major in September 1942. He was assigned initially to the Information Branch, Special Service Division, Services of Supply, at the War Department. In 1943, by then a lieutenant colonel, he was transferred to the newly formed Historical Division of the General Staff, where his first task was to write a definitive analysis of the recent raids of James H. Doolittle on Tokyo. In October 1943, he was sent to the central Pacific to develop methods of combat research. In pursuing this work, he was attached to the Twenty-seventh Infantry Division during the invasion of Makin Atoll in the Gilbert Islands and to the Seventh at the taking of Kwajalein. In these operations he devised the after-action, group-interview technique as a means of determining precisely what had happened in an engagement and why success or failure ensued.

In June 1944, Marshall was sent to the European Theater of Operations on temporary duty. He was attached to the Historical Section, Headquarters ETOUSA, and remained with that organization until the end of the war. In Europe he introduced the group-interview technique that he had developed in the Pacific and applied it to numerous major operations, including D - Day airborne landings and the Ardennes campaign. In July 1945, he was designated theater historian, and a year later he returned to civilian life and the Detroit News. In 1947, Marshall published what is probably his most influential work, Men Against Fire. Based on his after-action interviews during World War II, he advanced the claim that fewer than a quarter of American infantrymen actually fired their weapons in any given action. The work stressed the importance of training, discipline, and above all, communication, in overcoming the paralyzing effect of the modern battlefield. The book was discussed in army circles and had some impact on the formation of military doctrine in the immediate postwar period, yet some high-ranking officers expressed doubt about the source and veracity of his data, and by the 1980's several articles by professional historians had appeared questioning his research methods.

In the postwar years Marshall, a colonel in the Officers' Reserve Corps, continued his close association with the army. He lectured frequently at service schools throughout the country and served occasional brief periods of active duty at the Pentagon. During the Korean War he served in the winter of 1950-51 as an operations analyst for the Operations Research Office, a John Hopkins University think tank under contract to the Department of the Army. In 1953 he again visited Korea as a journalist.

He was appointed brigadier general in the United States Army Reserve on May 7, 1957, and on July 30, 1960, he was placed on the retired list. Even in retirement he continued his endeavors on behalf of the army. Beginning in 1966, he made a series of quasi-official visits to Vietnam. Although his status was essentially that of a private individual, he traveled with the army's blessing and cooperation and worked in the army's interest, employing once again his group-interview technique, imparting it to a new generation of army historians, and making known through his writings the army's point of view in that unpopular war.

In his long career as military commentator, Marshall wrote more than thirty books, dozens of journal articles and countless newspaper, radio and television pieces. His books include The River and the Gauntlet (1953), Pork Chop Hill (1956), Battle at Best (1964), and Battles in the Monsoon (1967). In addition to his participation in four American wars, he observed the Sinai War of 1956 and the Six-Day War of 1967, the Lebanon crisis in 1958, the civil war in the Congo in 1961 and the unrest in Southwest Africa in 1965. Marshall received many honors and awards during his lifetime, including the Legion of Merit, the Bronze Star with oak-leaf cluster, the Combat Infantry Badge, and the Legion of Honor. He was elected to the National Cowboy Hall of Fame in 1972.

In 1974 he returned to El Paso to live out his retirement amidst the scenes of his youth. He marked the occasion by donating his professional library to his alma mater, the University of Texas at El Paso, where it now occupies a separate room in the University Library. Marshall died on December 17, 1977, and was buried in Fort Bliss National Cemetery with all honors due to departed general officer. His first marriage, to Ruth Elstner of El Paso, ended in divorce. They had one son. His second wife was Edith Ives Westervelt of Detroit, who died of multiple sclerosis in 1953. Marshall had three daughters with his third wife, Catherine (Finnerty), who survived him by eleven years. His autobiography, Bringing Up the Rear, was published in 1979.

SERIES DESCRIPTION

The S. L. A. Marshall Papers are arranged in five series:

Series I. Personal Papers, 1900-1977. 127 1/2 linear inches (26 document boxes).

Arranged in 5 subseries - Biographical, Family, Army, Journalism, and Photographs, Scrapbooks and Ephemera. This material includes personal materials regarding Marshall, his family, wives, children and friends. It also contains general materials about Marshall's journalism and army careers.

Series II. Literary Endeavors, 1920's-1977. 245 linear inches (51 document boxes).

Arranged alphabetically in 20 subseries - Books, Encyclopedia Articles, Fiction, Forewords and Introductions, Fragments, Journal Articles, Letters to Editor, Military Publications, Narration, Newspaper Articles, Newspaper Columns, Poetry, Original Notes and Notebooks, Plays, Poetry, Radio and Television Broadcasts, Reviews of Books, Speeches, Lectures and Symposia, Symposia Proceedings, and Television Special Reports. These materials encompass Marshall's published and unpublished writings and speaking engagements.

Series III. Correspondence, 1917-1977. 68 linear inches (14 document boxes).

Arranged in three subseries - Incoming, Outgoing, and Military. Topics range from personal letters, to publication projects, to congratulatory correspondence. The Military correspondence refers to various issues Marshall encountered during his time with several army departments.

Series IV. Secondary Reference, 1917-1977. 85 Linear inches (17 document boxes).

This is one series, with topics arranged alphabetically. Included are such materials as newspaper clippings, manuals, articles, books and brochures. Collected material covers a variety of subjects, such as war, fighting, civil defense and military personnel.

Series V. Audio Visual materials, 1930-1979, 109 1/2 Linear inches (14 document boxes and one oversized folder in map case).

Arranged by format. Audio cassettes, reel-to-reel tapes, video tapes, negatives and slides. Audio materials include speeches, songs and radio programs given by Marshall. Video materials include various events and speeches given by Marshall. One video cassette includes excerpts of the opening of the Marshall Military Room in 1979. Negatives date from the 1930's to 1977 and range from snapshots of people to snapshots of vacations.

SCOPE AND CONTENT NOTE

The S. L. A. Marshall Papers, composed of 122 boxes, 2 oversized folders and a box of medals, consists primarily of examples of Marshall's literary and speaking endeavors. Included are personal identification documents, correspondence, manuscripts, newspaper clippings, journal articles, photographs, citations, maps, scrapbooks, oral history interviews, notes, books, pamphlets, films and audio tapes. The collection is organized in five series.

The first series is the Personal Papers, the bulk of which is personal in nature and includes the broader details of Marshall's career as a journalist, author, army historian and soldier. Little information about his family is found within the papers, but what there is, is included in this series. Biographical information on Marshall ranges from newspaper clippings about him to oral history interviews with him, to a festschrift in honor of his 75th Birthday. Also included in this series are awards, citations, invitations to speak, military orders and travel documents, and his reserve status papers.

The largest type of material in the Personal Papers is photographic and includes unframed photographs, and scrapbook albums (1917, 1931-1940, 1960-1973). Within the scrapbooks are portraits of Marshall and memorabilia that encompasses his personal, military and journalistic sides. Photographic material includes snapshots of family and friends, portraits of fellow journalists and authors, and signed portraits of military personalities. A glimpse of Marshall's artistic talent is shown in several drawings and water colors that are included in the sub-series Photographs, Scrapbooks and Ephemera. Medals, uniforms and plaques make up the bulk of the ephemera.

The second series encompasses Marshall's Literary Endeavors. It includes books, articles, speeches, and transcripts of his radio broadcasts. Documented in this series are Marshall's earliest efforts on several El Paso newspapers (1922-1927), his career with the Detroit News (1927-1974), his writings for the army while a member of the Historical branch, his speeches and other speaking endeavors. Some examples include both manuscript and published versions.

Thirteen of the books that Marshall wrote are represented in this series, but of these, ten are photocopied final drafts. Marshall donated the originals to Saint Bonaventure University, New York, in 1959 and 1973. Also to be noted, is that in 1973 and 1974 Marshall donated the bulk of his field notes and working papers made during World War II, the Korean War, the Vietnam War, the Sinai campaign of 1956 and the Six-Day War of 1967 to the U.S. Army Military History Institute at Carlisle Barracks, Pennsylvania.

The third series, Correspondence, is arranged into three sub-series. A separate index for personal names of incoming correspondents is attached. Included in the outgoing material are letters to family (1917-1966), letters he wrote thanking friends for their letters of condolence on the death of his second wife, Ives, and letters to his third wife, Cate. Much of the correspondence is of a business nature regarding his many publications.

Secondary Reference is the fourth series. The materials cover a broad range of subjects; these are mainly of a military nature and generally are published. This series includes newspaper clippings, journal articles, books, pamphlets, manuals and photographs. Duplicate materials were removed.

The fifth series is made up of Audio-Visual materials. Subjects range from speeches to video clips of the posthumous opening of the Marshall Room at the University of Texas at El Paso Library. This series also includes some photographic prints of a more artistic nature, possibly photographed by his second wife Ives, and copious negatives, broadly categorized by Marshall.

PROVENANCE

In August 1974, just prior to his return home to El Paso in retirement, General Marshall made arrangements to donate his military library, collected over a period of 55 years, to his alma mater, The University of Texas at El Paso.

The original donation consisted of 2,237 books. General Marshall later added to his book collection 14 boxes of periodicals, scrapbooks, notebooks, newspaper columns and clippings, speeches, maps, radio and television scripts, audiotape recordings, and photographs. These donations were placed in the Special Collection Department of the University Library and became the nucleus of what is now the S.L.A. Marshall History Collection.

After the General's death in 1977, arrangements were made between the University and his widow, Mrs. Cate F. Marshall, to purchase the balance of General Marshall's personal library and the remainder of his papers including a large collection of correspondence, documents, manuscripts and ephemera.

RESTRICTIONS

The correspondence of Liddell Hart is restricted according to the originating repository. The materials in the S.L.A. Marshall collection are photocopies from this repository.

LITERARY RIGHTS

Permission to publish material from the S.L.A. Marshall Papers, 1900-1977 must be obtained from the C.L. Sonnichsen Special Collections Department, the University of Texas at El Paso Library.

***Note that being a General of the Army is not the same thing as being a General in the Army. A General of the Army (five stars) is in charge of all the troops in the United States and they can never retire. In contrast a General in the Army (four stars) is only in charge of his assigned troops and they can retire.
