Student Involvement Theme Of This Year's Activities

BY JOSEPH RICE

During the past summer, nine new judges of the Student Supreme Court were elected to replace the officers of the court which had served two years. The sessions were not for credit; no grades were given. Yearly elections are held to maintain the constantly high, averaging seven to nine persons for each meeting.

At the sessions, matters of publications were proposed, researched, argued over, and heard through participation. The supreme court holds regular sessions, and has the power to hear and rule on all cases submitted from the student body. The court also has jurisdiction over all minor courts, and can hear any case that may arise among students.

Courses of original jurisdiction at Texas Western College which are heard by the Supreme Court are: Women's dormitory court; disciplinary; suspension of rights and privileges; and failure in the life of the campus. These powers are vested in the Supreme Court, and any case that may arise is subject to the Student Supreme Court's jurisdiction.

The Supreme Court is the upper court of appeals. It will hear any case that may arise that is not within the jurisdiction of a minor court. The court will also hear any case that has been appealed to the Supreme Court from a lower court.

The Faculty Committee on Discipline also has the power to review all cases involving scholastic dishonesty, and may impose any penalty they deem fit. Any appeal from the Faculty Committee will be heard by the Supreme Court. The court will uphold or reverse any decision of the Faculty Committee.

Last year's court members all served as senators, and were selected to their positions on the basis of scholastic and social qualities. The election process is supervised by the Student Supreme Court, and is conducted by the SA Constitution rules and regulations.

THE PROSPECTOR

September 10, 1965

SEPTEMBER 18 a new tradition will formally be born at Texas Western College.

On this date, the traditional "M Day" festivities will be held with an importance difference—the M has been transferred to the north end of the Sun Bowl.

Although many will probably complain "another tradition has just bitten the dust," the change will be to the advantage of the College. The name of the letter which mars any beauty of the College's reputation has just bitten the dust," the change will be to the advantage of the College.

In addition, students will be able to participate in the fun of moving the M. Students will be able to celebrate the day with the tradition of "M Day" festivities.

The opportunities are numerous—students can participate in a variety of events and activities.

"M" Tradition Change Has Many Good Points

ONE OF THE MAIN PROBLEMS was one of expense. Buses had to be provided to bring the students to the site, in addition to the expense and transportation costs of the whitewash, equipment, water, etc. The money that was saved would be able to be put to better use in the future for general gold and lighting, and the traditional whitewashing of the M will continue into the future.

In the past few years, whitewashing the M has presented many difficulties, according to Fred Craft, SA president.

New Campus Magazine
A new Texas Western College magazine will join the ranks of other publications on campus, beginning with its initial issue in late-Spring. The magazine will be published quarterly by the News and Information Department under the direction of Editor Doug Earhart.
Texas Western is now enjoying relief from one of its growing pains, a shortage of Campus telephones.

The Centrex System went into operation September 1 and will increase the College's telephone capacity by nearly three times, providing private numbers for every extension and linking TWC closer to the community.

The new system promises to be a money saver as well, according to Harry E. Gerecke, assistant business manager for the College.

Texas Western has outgrown the old campus switchboard, Gerecke said, and new switchboards and trunks would have been needed to expand the telephone capacity beyond its limit of 365. New switchboards would have resulted in the need for more operators.

The Centrex system, installed by the Mountain States Telephone Company, increases the telephone capacity to 1,000. It will speed service to the public and permit one operator to handle more calls. Moreover, equipment costs will be borne by the telephone company instead of the College.

Although every telephone will have its private number, only administrative numbers will be listed in the city directory. Individuals should notify callers of new numbers at once in order to avoid a jam at the switchboards, calling for information, Mr. Gerecke advised.

One result of the new system is that dormitory residents may have private phones in their rooms.

College operators will not give numbers for dormitory students, Gerecke said, but will refer the caller to the dormitory director.

Gerecke explained that the telephone company will supply two operators to transfer calls which come in to the old College number. Additionally, he said, the College will employ three duty operators to handle calls coming to the old number, and to transfer to individual telephones those calls made through the new general college number.

Dormitory residents who wish to have phones in their rooms may apply at the time they make room reservations, or when paying dorm fees. Students who share a room will share the phone service charge for phone service.
