Greek contributions to student life began as early as 1919 when a few engineers organized the Alpha Phi Omega fraternity.

Then, as today, the fraternity gave students opportunities for friendships, associations, and social activity they otherwise would not have had.

Since 1919 many Greek letter societies have appeared on campus, some disappearing and some remaining to the present day.

There are now six fraternities and four sororities with a total of eight lodges on the Texas Western campus. Numerous social and fraternal organizations have been built up during the past fifteen years, meeting the social needs of their respective groups and contributing to the growth of the college.

Working together on a wide variety of projects, Homecoming, Variety Shows, Student Association Activities, and the Campus Chest, the Greeks make their contribution to the character, scholarship, and citizenship of the student, now and in years to come.

Only students majoring in geology or engineering who have attained sophomore standing are eligible for membership in Alpha Phi Omega, the oldest Greek letter fraternity on the campus. APO was organized by six engineering students in 1919, when TWC was Texas College of Mines. By choice the fraternity is not affiliated with a national organization; members direct their own policies. Race, color, or creed does not influence invitation to APO.
